The American Youth Literacy Foundation (www.YouthLit.org) is looking for more high school tutors to help teach younger kids how to read. This is an after school, weekend or evening opportunity to earn community service hours while making a real difference in someone’s life and in the community. You will teach here at the library working with kids whose parents sign them up for extra help.

The American Youth Literacy Foundation (Youth Lit) is a 501 (c) (3) charitable non-profit dedicated to the belief that all children deserve an equal opportunity to learn how to read and that high school students can help younger students achieve reading proficiency.

We are based out of Collegeville, PA near King of Prussia and operate in 14 locations in Pennsylvania and New Jersey providing free tutoring to underprivileged and under-served children in grades 1-5. Youth Lit recruits and trains high school student volunteers to become qualified "literacy mentors." Youth Lit then partners with community outreach programs such as your public library, and other non-profit organizations, and then sends tutors to these locations to provide one-on-one coaching to children who need extra help with reading.

If you are in 10th thru 12th grade and want to participate, please visit our website and fill out the “tutor sign up” form. We will email you soon regarding training, times and dates, locations, etc.

Training begins in mid September. We have another class starting in October and again in January. Our locations are currently in Mercer, Burlington and Camden Counties in NJ and in Montgomery and Bucks Counties in PA. See our website for more information. www.YouthLit.org. Click on “Tutor Sign Up” page.

American Youth Literacy Foundation™

Kids helping kids . . . Learn to Read

Mr. Kali Woodward,
Director
www.YouthLit.org
info@youthlit.org
215-868-1098
492 Reginald Lane
Collegeville PA 19426